How did you get started in Transformative Leadership?
I graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in economics from Harvard College and a Masters of Business Administration from Stanford University. I hold a bachelor's degree in economics from Rutgers University and a master of business administration from Harvard Business School. I worked for IBM prior to earning my MBA.

What are the biggest accomplishments of your career?
I've delivered many global technology products for banks, for stock markets, and technology organizations. I would say I have a great deal of pride in the teams that I've been able to build over the years, especially in their capabilities of management, consistently delivering for the various businesses that I've worked for by finding new solutions to business problems. The ownership that my team and I have been able to provide for those organizations is important, as well.

Why did you join the Transformative Leadership Advisory Board at Seton Hall?
With today's transformative technologies and ever-changing customer expectations, we need to help guide the upcoming experience makers of tomorrow.

What major trends do you see in the future?
The field of Transformative Leadership is evolving into one of the fastest-growing and most in-demand fields in the world. Companies that deliver extraordinary customer experience are better and different for customers, and more profitable and longer lasting than most other businesses.

Why should someone participate in the Seton Hall Transformative Leadership Program?
As firms create new Transformative Leadership divisions, the job market is expected to explode for CX Professionals over the next several years.
